Women Education Groups and Food Resilience - First Step

In the past few months there have been conversations around availability of vegetables, fruits and food grains etc. The issue of access, availability and affordability have been highlighted by the women in the regular meetings. These triggered the issues of health, nutrition influenced by the eating habits. This has been one of our focus points over the last couple of years.

Libraries & COVID-19

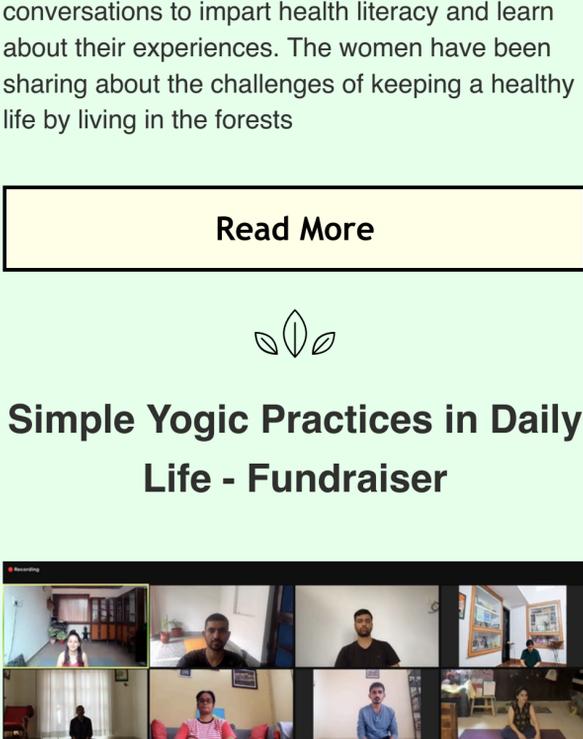

For a child, books are a medium to unfold an untold reality. It is a medium of exploring and imagining a new world. The forest libraries are one such medium for children to witness the world outside the forest. A way to figure what is all the noise about as they venture out as a community outside the forests. The picture books trigger curiosity and engage children in a conversation where a dialogue acts as a tool of educating them.

Women Speak - Part 1

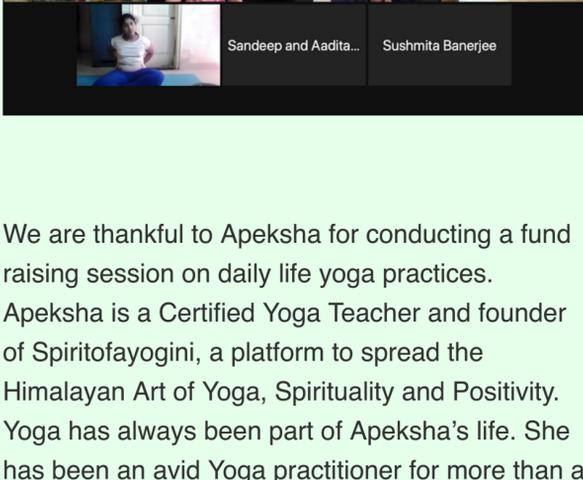

Women are the last ones to open up when it comes to speaking in public gatherings. They have a lot to say but the years of socialization under the umbrella of patriarchy don't let them speak. Enabling the women to speak on topics like menstruation, women health and well-being is a tough nut to crack.

Samanta is aiming to "engage" women in such conversations to impart health literacy and learn about their experiences. The women have been sharing about the challenges of keeping a healthy life by living in the forests
